

About the Book

This book offers perspective in innovations, practice-based analysis and research concerning the issues that current dimensions of urban development in India. A collection of articles, essays, papers and case-studies, the book provides a platform for exchange of ideas among practitioners, academicians and policy-makers, including activists and NGOs at national and local where the contributors bring out viewpoints from a wide range of professional experience and cultural background. By challenging traditional methods and practices, the volume seeks to simulate thoughts about novel approaches to solving urban, especially through the participation of all stakeholders and not just the government.

Contents:

Section I: Urban planning

1. From chaos to coherence – making Indian cities more livable through better planning
2. FSI as a city planning instrument

Section II: Urban JNNURM

3. Towards the next generation JNNURM

Section III: Urban water

4. Urban water sector – time for the nuts and bolts of reforms

Section IV: Urban transport

5. Mind the gap- the growing chasm between policies and programmes in urban transport
6. Pune Mahanagar Parivhan mahamandal ltd : the road ahead
7. The need for a new orientation to the national urban transport policy for india

Section V: Urban power

8. Analysis of power situation in Pune and suggestions for sustainable urban electricity development
9. The Zero load shedding model or how civic society can collectively resolve their own issues
10. The next generation of electricity reforms: a primer on the role of indian energy exchange

Section VI: Urban environment

11. Future urban environment – building green

Section VII: Urban poverty

12. Urban poverty alleviation: policy and programme initiative

Section VIII: Urban governance

13. Globalization and the challenges of good urban governance in India